LIMITING LOANS ON LIBERTYS NOW NEW

Plan in Operation Considerable Time, Says Platt. Officials of the Treasury Department declared to-day that the policy of limiting loans on Libertys to their market value was not a new one, but had been operation in most of the reserve banks for a considerable time.

In the absence of Governor Harding of the Reserve Board, who is in New York, Edmund Platt, its vice-governor, York, Edmund Platt, its vice-governor, stated to-day that no new rule had been adopted by that agency in regard to loans made on Libertys.

"Most of the Federal Reserve banks throughout the country." Mr. Platt said to-day, "have been limiting loans on Liberty bonds to their market value to ofty banks. This has not been so, however, in the case of country banks, whose institutions have been making loans based on the par value of the Liberty bonds."
